Ridder's Gas Regulator.—Saving 25 per cont.; with a better light.

Maximatran Gas Works, Oct. 23, 1852.

The Gas Regulator of Dr. Ridder is, in my opinion, the most valuable instrument for regulating the flow of gas to the burnjers that I have ever seen.

It is correctin principle, and will accomplish admirably the abjects for which it was designed. It will insure great steadmens in the lights and as the pressure at the meter is, by this instrument, reduced considerably below that on the street mains, it will enable the communer to sain as equal amount of light at a smaller expenditure for gas, in the less the pressure under which the gas is consumed, the greater is the amount of light obtained.

DAYARD TAYLOR'S ADVENTURES IN

AFRICA is the most popular book of the day. The Plates having been redrawn, a new edition is now ready.

From The London Daily News.

If it were possible to add anything to the fascination which attracts so many travelests to the banks of the Nile, this volume would do it. "LEstract from a long review."

From The Hartford Rapublican.

We can think of no more delicious enjoyment than to take this book and wander of slone under the polden October trees and drawn aways sumy day over its deliciting pages. There is no romance to use quite equal to one of Bayard Taylor's books of travel. Fact under his wonderful pen is more chaming than faction.

"Asswriter of travels especially, he has never found his equal. His chapters are perfect daguerreotypes of the scence described."

From The Botton Tayeller.

"No writer could desire a better subject, and few could treat it better than our author. The style is warm, clear and amooth, full of the and animation."

From The Chicago Congregational Hereld.

"Carries his reader with him in a most delightful companloraship."

From The New-York Christian Enquirer.

Carries his reader with him in a most designtful companionship."

From The New-York Christian Enquirer.

"If any one will just open this delightful volume at page 35, and read the seventh chapter, we are much mistaken if he will not think Bayard Taylor of necessity the most capital fellow-traveler in the world."

"There is enough of poetry, pathos, humor and sentiment in his sketches, combined with keen observation, blended by a light not airy grace of eyle to stock a dozen would be traveler's note books. In chivatire lottiness of purpose, taste, energy, love of the beautiful and all that is heroic he would have made a fitting companion for Sir Walter Raleigh."

The picture is oriental in its magnificence, exact in its details, and while glowing with all the brilliancy of a romauce, impresses every one with its verisimilitade. There are books of travel more ambilitiously written, but none that take the reader so completely over the ground described, and introduce him so entirely to the adventure and excinement of travel."

From The Philadeiphia North American.

"How Mr. Taylor should have accomplished this dangerous voyage is, indeed, wonderful; it is still more wonderful that he should return to tell of it."

"We question whether anything more exquisitely graceful, east and powerful can be uset with in the wide range of topographical or descriptive literature than is to be found in every

It is almost impossible to exagerate the value of a work of this character at the present day. The discripes of Infidelity have gathered up the experience of their conquered predeces in this painful hattle, and under a new and plausible terminology, and with unreasing enterprise, energy and fact are evening the all and vine that atheistic poison broadcast throughout the land.
